In August of 1969 The Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will hold a World Conference on Records and a Genealogical Convention and Seminar. Archivists, librarians, historians, genealogists, demographers, microfilm experts and other persons directly involved with records preservation and records management have been invited.

We are happy to announce this very important conference and invite you and members of your department to attend. I have enclosed some information which will be of interest to you. Included is a roster of special guests and program participants. Representatives from the National Archives of the Soviet Union and leading archivists from other eastern countries will be in attendance. Dr. James B. Rhoads, National Archivist of the United States will speak in general session on the subject, "The Archivist in the World of Tomorrow".

There will be a comprehensive exhibition held in the new "Salt Palace" Convention Center in Salt Lake City. Many major companies and organizations have booked space for what will prove to be one of the most interesting and informative exhibitions ever held in this field. Among the exhibitors are: Agfa-Gevaert, Eastman Kodak, Watson Manufacturing Corporation, The National Genealogical Society, Universal Microfilming, Encyclopedia Britannica, Charles E. Tuttle Co., Inc., The National Archives, International Business Machines, 3M Company and many other industrial, private and governmental organizations. Your department may also wish to exhibit. We will be happy to provide space for you and will forward further information upon your request.

Already, registration requests from all over the world are arriving in Salt Lake City, and it is expected that 10,000-15,000 delegates will be in attendance. We will appreciate very much if arrangements could be made for members of your department to be in attendance at this very unusual and important conference.

Sincerely yours,

THE GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY
